Mouet de Langlade – Kapiouapnokoué or Oukabé Family

Augustin Mouet de Langlade, son of Pierre Mouet and Élisabeth Jutras, was baptized 16 September 1703 in Trois-Rivières [Jetté, p. 841]. His godparents were Jacques Gue and Françoise Jutras [ancestry.com, Drouin Collection, T, Trois-Rivières, Imaculée-Conception, cathédrale l’Assomption, 1699-1727, Image 22].

The involvement of the Mouet, Jutras, and Radisson family in the fur trade during the 17th and early part of the 18th century:

Mouet Family:
Pierre Mouet, sieur de Moras, the immigrant ancestor, was involved in a fur-trade transaction in 1682. On 6 May 1682 Jacques Maugras and Pierre Mouet formed an association to equip a canoe for a voyage to the Ottawa. Maugras agreed to make the journey to the Ottawa with Robert Giguère and Étienne Lafond. After the costs of the merchandise had been reimbursed, Maugras and Mouet would divide the profits in half [Ameau and Roy, Vol. 11, p. 116].

Michel Mouet, sieur de Moras, son of Pierre Mouet and Marie Toupin, was hired to travel to Détroit as part of the 16 July 1702 convoy to Détroit [Antoine Adhémar, FHL microfilm #1613459, images #00939, #00940, #00941; Adhémar; RAPQ1930, p. 207; Adhémar and Roy, Vol. 6, p. 98].

Thérèse Mouet, daughter of Pierre Mouet and Marie Toupin, was the second wife of Michel Trottier, sieur DesRuisseaux and Beaubien, who agreed to go to Détroit in 1708. On 18 May 1708, Michel Trottier, seigneur de Rivière-du-Loup and François Fafard dit Delorme, acting for themselves and for Alexis Trottier and Bernard Brisset, their associates, declared to François Ardouin, acting for Antoine de Lamothe Cadillac that they would transport merchandise to Cadillac in Détroit and return to Montréal with furs [Antoine Adhémar, MNR, Vol. 2, pp. 469-471]. Eight members of the Trottier family were involved in the fur trade during the 17th century and first ten years of the 18th century. See the article A 17th Century Voyage to the Great Lakes on The Fur Trade Page on the FCHSM website for a discussion of the voyage taken by Antoine Trottier and several other traders with René Ménard, S.J.:

Jutras and Radisson Families: Augustin Mouet’s mother Élisabeth Jutras was the sister of the explorer Pierre Esprit de Radisson.
Élisabeth Jutras’ cousin, Dominique Jutras, was involved in at least one fur trade voyage. On 20 June 1675, Joseph Huet and Dominique Jutras made an agreement regarding their voyage to the Ottawa with sieurs Jacques Maugras and Quintal [Thomas Frerot and Roy, Vol. 10, p. 56].

Élisabeth Jutras’ brother, Pierre Jutras, sieur de LaPerrotière, was also involved in the fur trade. On 4 August 1688 Edmond Chorel hired Pierre Jutras for a voyage to the Ottawa [Antoine Adhémar, MNR, Vol. 1, p. 242].

In 1700, Pierre Jutras, sieur de LaPerrotière, was one of several officers arrested and tried for illegal trading at Fort Frontenac [17th Century Timelines, Part 9:

On 10 July 1703, the Compagnie de la Colonie hired Pierre Jutras, sieur de LaPerrotière, as part of the convoy to Détroit [RAPQ1930, p. 208; Adhémar and Roy, Vol. 6, p. 115].

Augustin Mouet, sieur de Langlade, married Domitilde *Kapiouapnokoué or Oukabé, widow of Daniel Joseph Amiot dit Villeneuve, before 1729 at Michilimackinac [PRDH #90023]. The couple had one son, Charles Michel Mouet de Langlade, who was baptized 9 May 1729 in Michilimackinac [Ste. Anne, Mackinac, Baptisms, 1695-1749, Image 6].

After his marriage, Augustin Mouet, sieur de Langlade, was involved in the fur trade:

On 6 July 1731, François Poulin de Francheville consented to an obligation from Augustin Mouet de Langlade for 1823 livres and 7 sols for his voyage to the Sioux [RAPQ1930, p. 286].

On 6 August 1732, Augustin Mouet de Langlade hired Jean Baptiste Gendron to make a voyage to the Sioux [Jean Baptiste Adhémar, RAPQ1930, p. 294].

On 4 August 1733, Augustin Mouet de Langlade hired Jacques Chevalier to make a voyage to the Sioux [Jean Baptiste Adhémar, RAPQ1930, p. 302].
